BEN BRADY'S SUCCESSOR.

Republicans and Democrats Claim Authority to Appoint.

Political goestpe were busy yesterday speslating as to who would succeed to the office of Constable in Justice Spaulding's listrict, made vacant by Ben Brady's death Although this is a question of some im-portance to the local Democracy, it was secondary to the discussion as to the maner in which the vacancy will be filled,

The law which created the two additional bestless' districts last year was a special act of the Legislature, which vested in the Governor the approintment of the Judges and Constables until the next election. Owing to some minunderstanding among those possible for the drafting and passage of law, it is said no special provision was the law, it is said no special provision was made for the appointment of a successor to either of the incumbents of these two districts in the event of a vacancy caused by death or resignation. Under these circumstances the Republicans declare that the appointing power is vessed to the Circuit Judges, under the law of 1891. If this be true, firstly's successor is almost certain to be a Republican, as the Circuit Judges are guitement and Rosen attempted to defend the trusts. The same conditions apply to the men employed by the other factories absorbed by the trust, and even more so to the office forces. The bookkeeping is all done in New York, and the old office forces have been replaced with a lot of young men whose dutles are merely those of copylais, and very few of the old office men and women are left, because they could not afford to work for the pairry sularies offered them. Hence they have gone out into the world of labor, to compete with others and help reduce wages, and yet Mr. Rosen thinks trusts are a blessing.

pete with others and help reduce wages, And yet Mr. Rosen thinks trusts are a blessing.

"It is true, these men are not out of work, Oh, no! They have gone into other lines. They had to support themselves and families; but how have they obtained work? By competing with the men in other lines, and, through force of circumstances, accepting positions at much less than they had formerly received. But dire necessity left them no choice. Work they must, as a large majority of them were family men. They jumped at any chance offered, and thus aded in reducing salaries all along the line. But, then, trusts are a blessing to salesmen and effice men! God protect us from such blessings!

"By the way, does Mr. Rosen know that the Wright Bros. factory in St. Charles was absorbed by the trust, and moved, lock, stock and barret, to St. Louis, thus throwing out of employment about 20 men, women and children in that small community? Boes he know that the "Sorg" factory in Misialetown, O., has been closed down, ilrowing out of employment about 1,350 persons? And, I am informed, there are two or three more factories closed, and the brands are now made in Louisville. Are not the Butler and Brown factories here closed? And by so closing, have they not thrown out of lucrative employment all of the floor superintendents, engineers, office forces, etc., etc., and forced them onto the aircady overcrowded labor macket? And yet trusts are to be considered blessings. I, for one, earn't see it."
